Weather conditions and general forecast.—
A trough of low pressure covers the entire slope region and Mississippi valley, with distinct centers of disturbances in Kansas and Manitoba. It has caused general rains over these districts, extending into the upper lake region, while in the middle and northern plateaus and Pacific coast regions snows and rains occurred generally.

Temperatures are 2 degrees to 15 degrees above the seasonal average in the interior of the country, while from the Alleghany mountain district northeastward they have fallen 4 degrees to 22 degrees, and are 3 degrees to 16 degrees below the seasonal average. In the Pacific coast and plateau regions they have fallen somewhat.

The rain area will extend into the east gulf states and Ohio valley Saturday night, and during Sunday to the Atlantic coast. Rain tonight in the west gulf states and lower Ohio valley will be followed by fair and colder weather Sunday.

It will be warmer tonight in the Ohio valley and lower lake region, and warmer Sunday in northern New York and the interior of New England.

On the Atlantic coast winds will be mostly fresh northerly to easterly.
